THREE IMPORTANT NEW BOOKS
to be published this Autumn.

ROBERT BLAKE, Sometime Commanding all the Fleets and Naval Forces of England, by Colonel Roger Beadon, C.B.E., sm.8vo., with 8 plates and 2 maps. ... 15/-

This biography of the Great English Admiral who rose to fame in the wars with the Dutch under Oliver Cromwell was originally undertaken at the suggestion of the late Sir John Fortescue, and the author has had access to extensive newly-discovered material, including some 300 letters of Blake not yet published.

"Three reasons" writes Colonel Beadon, "have tempted me to write a life of Blake. The first is that he has been the most neglected, although as I conceive he stands among the greatest, of English Men of Action. The second is that he was under the Lord Protector, the creator and chief architect of the Royal Navy. And now that the trident is, perhaps, less securely in our hands, the occasion is fitting to recall how in the space of a single decade English Maritime power was raised from insignificance to a dominance which, with but few and transient lapses, it has maintained up to our own days.

CRUISING HINTS, by Francis B. Cooke, fifth edition, fully revised and enlarged, sm.8vo., with 88 illusts. in text and 14 folding plates. ... 21/-

The eminently enjoyable manner in which Mr. Cooke passes on the fruits of his wide experience has won him a great following among small-boat enthusiasts, and CRUISING HINTS has long been his most popular book. Besides completely revising the book and bringing it up to date for the fifth edition, he has added a great deal of fresh information on a large variety of subjects; it is now about half as long again as before and forms a complete compendium for the cruising yacht-owner.

The number of folding plates showing detailed designs of yachts has been increased, and only one is retained from the fourth edition; the rest are new and several of these previously unpublished.

KEYES (ADMIRAL OF THE FLEET SIR ROGER). The Naval Memoirs of, Scapa Flow to the Dover Straits, 1916-1918, maps and illusts., sm.8vo., ... 18/-

The second instalment of these deeply interesting memoirs opens after the evacuation of Gallipoli. There would have been no evacuation could the Admiral have had his own way, and on being ordered to London to give evidence before the Dardanelles Commission, he did so with no uncertain voice.

While in the Grand Fleet he made a deep study of the much misunderstood Battle of Jutland, a vivid account of which is embodied in the book.

Sir Roger Keyes led the attack on Zeebrugge which made memorable St. George's Day, 1918, and in the autumn of that year commanded the naval forces in the great offensive which resulted in the final evacuation of Bruges and the Flanders Coast. In November he rode into Brussels when the King and Queen of the Belgians triumphantly entered their liberated capital.

Yachts has been increased, and only one is retained from the fourth edition. The rest are new and several of the new ones are of a more modern type.

The number of folding plates showing detailed designs of comprehensions for the cruising yacht-owner.

"From what has lately taken place in the United States and the distress that is likely to ensue in this quarter from the scarcity of provisions . . . with proper Convoys, and Encouragement our remaining American Colonies would soon be sufficient to supply all the wants of these Islands. I am only sorry we have been so long blind to our own Interest by encouraging the Industry of the Inhabitants of the United States to that of our own subjects in Canada, Nova Scotia, &c."
- 116 Collingwood (Vice-Admiral Lord) TWO AUTOGRAPH LETTERS SIGNED, 7 pp., 4to., off Cadiz, Mar. 20 and July 6, 1807, both addressed to Capt. Mansfield, mentioning his weariness of the war but constant watchfulness, carefully repaired £7
 Both long and interesting letters containing detailed remarks on the decline of ship construction, the writer's strong objection to the abolition of poops and his hope of Capt. Mansfield's support off Sardinia which he expects will be an "active station."
- 117 ——— AUTOGRAPH LETTER SIGNED, 2½ pp., 4to., "Barfleur," May 22, 1801, to Benj. Tucker, Esq. £5
 After a few remarks on Tucker's management of his affairs, and his correspondence with Admiralty on his desire of having Mr. Thomas his first lieutenant, he writes, "We have been lately led to expect the Fleet from Brest to make some attempt on the sea—either to try their skill with us—or shift their quarters by a flight, the hope of their coming out has given great spirits to every body, and they are looking forward to another glorious day to be added to the Naval History. We have just recovered in the Barfleur from a malignant putrid fever, which threatened us destruction—the banefull effects of a Port," &c.

- The year 1797, when the Fleet mutinied at the Nore and Spithead and thousands of British sailors refused to go to sea, was one of the darkest in our history. The character and causes of this extraordinary, revolutionary movement have never been adequately explored, and the personality of the sailors' leader, Richard Parker, has always been an enigma. The Authors of "The Floating Republic," by patient and exhaustive research among contemporary records, are able to explain many of the baffling circumstances of the mutinies. They show how genuine were the grievances of the men and how bad was the bungling of the ministers. Their collaboration has produced a book that is both scholarly and exciting.

- "My aim has been to illustrate this often elusive subject, and chiefly at those points where it affected the future of mankind. Also as no more new materials seem available about the best known discoverers, I have treated them comparatively briefly in order to deal more fully with others whose work has not been duly appreciated. My guiding motive has been to correlate the efforts of shipbuilders, inventors, explorers, and statesmen, and thus to show how the world has been opened up for habitation. This programme is so wide that it precludes all notice of naval wars, polar explorations, and all but the outstanding technical details of seacraft."

Scott to the South Pole in 1910, 7 leaves, measuring 14 $\frac{3}{4}$ by 11 in., preserved in 4to., cl. case £90

The members of the expedition agreed to serve "On a voyage from London to the Antarctic Regions calling at any port or ports either on the outward or homeward passage voyaging as may be required between latitude 60° North and 90° South by Robert Falcon Scott, Commander of the Expedition . . . Term of engagement not to exceed four years."

"Each member of the Crew takes part in the hazard of this Expedition as regards his person and his property entirely at his own risk. Every member of the Crew shall assist in unloading, transferring, and taking on board, stores and goods, &c. . . any of the Crew shall if required leave the said ship and remain in the Antarctic Regions with the wintering party which it is proposed to leave there." . . .

This Document contains 64 signatures, including all the Officers (with the exception of Captain Scott), the scientific staff, ship's party, and men.

Of tragic interest are the members of Capt. Scott's party:—

Capt. Lawrence E. G. Oates ("He went out into the blizzard and we have not seen him since").

Edgar Evans, Petty Officer, R.N., died March 17th, 1912.

Edward Adrian Wilson, Chief of Scientific Staff, and Henry R. Bowers, Lieutenant, R.I.M., both of whom died in the tent with Captain Scott.

There are of course the signatures of

A. Cherry-Garrard, H. G. Ponting, Griffith Taylor, R. E. Priestley, &c.

Probably the only document containing the signatures of all the members of the expedition, including the dog boy from N. Russia and the groom from Vladivostock.

VANCOUVER AT NOOTKA

VANCOUVER (George, Circumnavigator). A Very Important Autograph Letter, signed, 2½pp., 4to., "Discovery," Nootka Sound, Oct. 2nd, 1794. Written whilst on his famous voyage. £80

. . . "We arrived here this day month, all in high health and spirits, having truly determined the non-existence of any water communication between this and the opposite side of America within the limits of our investigation beyond all doubt or disputation, hence I expect no further detention in this hemisphere, not doubting but the business respecting these territories must have been settled a sufficient length of time for a vessel to have arrived by whom we might be relieved and proceed on our route toward Old England, in hopes to partake of some shair (sic) in the glorious and honourable cause her fleets and armies are at present engaged in, but in these expectations we were disappointed, no vessel having arrived from England to that effect, nor have I received any information in answer to my despatches sent home by Mudge and Broughton as I expected by way of New Spain, but are still in expectations of some news from that quarter, as a packet was waiting at St. Bless to forward the despatches respecting the Restitution of this country, etc., but has not yet arrived. Thus you see, my good friend, I am once more entrapped in this infernal Ocean, and am totally at a loss to say when I shall be able to quit it." . . .

This letter is quoted in Godwin's "Vancouver," 1930 (page 257).
